More than a university. A way of life.

For members of the Collins family, their involvement in the University of Nevada, Reno didn’t end when class was dismissed. This deep-rooted Nevada family has always been passionate about being part of the fabric of Nevada tradition. After all, this was where lifelong friends were made, sibling bonds were strengthened, and campus was treated like a second home. From 1932 to today, the Collins family has always supported that old familiar phrase “home means Nevada.”
