A 123-Year Tradition at Nevada

It's rare to find a family with five generations at Nevada and links to both the University's beginning and its present. The Kline family's Nevada roots date to 1866 when Fred Kline opened a saddlery in Virginia City. His brother, Jacob, soon joined him, and since then 27 family members have attended Nevada. The first were Fred Kline’s daughter, Ida May, and Fred Morrill, her future brother-in-law, both in the first class to enter Nevada in Reno in 1887. The tradition continues with Megan Harrington, Class of 2008, and her brother, Eddy, Class of 2010.
