How a Nevada family tradition came full circle.

For one Nevada alum, graduation day in 2008 was just as special as it was back in 1941. When Phyllis Anker-Bendure, age 92, first attended the University of Nevada, Reno along with her brothers Peter and Leonard, she never could have guessed that her family would continue the tradition into the 21st century. In fact, with December 2008’s graduating class, the last of her grandchildren graduated from Nevada, making one amazing Nevada family tree—and one very proud grandmother. According to Phyllis, “Education doesn’t cost ... it pays!”
