Generation after generation of Nevada pride.

In his time, Charles H. Russell was a congressman and the governor of Nevada. But before all of that, he was a Nevada graduate. In fact, Charles was the very first member of his family to seek a college education when he enrolled in the fall of 1921. All five of his children enrolled, too, as well as several grandchildren. Today, with the present generation of 20 great grandkids, there are sure to be many more Russells walking in their great grandfather’s footsteps.
