Catalog Description

Intensive field study at various locations. Physical geography, settlement patterns, cultural landscapes and environmental issues. Maximum of 8 credits.

Required Textbooks/Materials

There is no text required for the course. All required readings will be distributed by the instructor. Readings will be used to emphasize material covered in the field and will assist students in completing required assignments. Students need to supply their own journals and cameras in order to complete assignments.

All students are responsible for their own tent, sleeping bag, and food; campsites, cooking supplies, and firewood will all be provided by the instructor. We will be camping at China State Park just north of the city. The campsite has flushing toilets, running water, and showers. A notebook and camera are required for the class as you will be making observations and writing journal entries of locations visited and discussed. The weather and conditions in San Francisco can be quite diverse, so it is imperative that you bring proper clothing. Rain gear and a warm coat are a must; please have comfortable walking shoes as we do a fair amount.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of this course, students will be able to

- examine and explain the physical geography, settlement patterns, cultural landscapes and environmental issues of the topic area;
- describe the spatial distribution and relations of the topic area; and
- evaluate the human environment interaction of the topic area.

Course Details

This course is designed to introduce students to the physical and cultural geography of San Francisco and its surrounding region. San Francisco is an international city defined by a diverse demographic, turbulent history, and unsettled geology. Students will have the opportunity, first hand, to experience these qualities by visiting, discussing, and observing sites within the city that define its grandeur. The geographic concept of "sense of place" will be emphasized as a way to experience the uniqueness of the urban environment.

All students are required to complete all required readings before the field portion of the course. While in the field, all students will maintain a journal, and complete the repeat photography assignments. Journals will be used to document observations of sites visited, studied, and discussed. Students will also use the journals to document evidence of a "sense of place."

Students registered in the course must meet all of the following requirements in order to receive credit:

- attend all scheduled meetings;
- complete all required readings;
- attend all field experiences; and
- complete and submit all required assignments.

Failure to complete all of the above stated requirements will result in a final grade of 'U.'

The course is strictly an S/U grade; no letter grades are available. In order to receive an "S" for a final grade all requirements (as stated above) must be met. Any of the requirements not met will result in a "U" as a final grade.
