Victims of Sexual Assault Often Exhibit the following:

- Fear
- Anger & Frustration
- Anxiety Attacks
- Depression
- Trouble Sleeping
- Eating Problems
- Feelings of Helplessness
- Panic Attacks
- Distraction, can’t concentrate
- Recurring Dreams or Nightmares
- Confusion / Disorientation
- Relationship Problems
- Difficulty Trusting People
- Difficulty Establishing or Re-establishing Normal Sexual Relationships
- Guilt, Shame or Self Blame
- Difficulty with Personal Boundaries
- Reckless or Risky Behavior

Victims often feel they are somehow responsible or should have been able to prevent the assault, this is especially true in cases where the suspect is known to the victim. Sexual Assault is a crime. Only the perpetrator is guilty.

Dealing with emotions as soon as possible allows the victim to regain a sense of perspective and control.

If you or someone you know has been sexually Assaulted . . .

Reporting to Police

Sexual Assault is a crime.

Victims are encouraged to report all crimes, including sexual assault, to the police. In addition to holding offenders accountable for their actions, reporting the crime can provide victims with access to immediate services such as medical care, advocacy and counseling.

If you choose to report the crime, you can help officers in investigating the case by preserving valuable evidence. Officers are trained to offer a sexual assault exam immediately upon reporting.

For best exam results try to refrain from:
- Bathing, showering or douching
- Changing or washing clothing
- Changing or washing bedding
- Using the bathroom
- Eating or drinking anything
- Applying medication
- Disturbing, cleaning the crime scene

Even if you do clean up, you can still report the crime. Evidence collection exams can be conducted 7-10 days after an assault has occurred.

If You Choose Not to Report

If you choose not to report the crime to police, you can still have a sexual assault exam and evidence will be preserved for a period of time. The Jane Doe Act allows sexual assault victims certain rights and services even if they choose not to report the crime. Contact Crisis Call Center or the Reno Police Victim Service Unit for details.

Whether or not you choose to report please consider the following:
- Seek medical care for any injuries
- Ask to be tested for sexually transmitted diseases
- Consider asking for the "morning after" pill to prevent pregnancy
- Contact Counseling Services or the Crisis Call Center for support

Sexual assault is a traumatic event. Victims often experience symptoms of post traumatic stress disorder. Getting the necessary support is critical to your emotional and physical health.

Reporting immediately is always best, but in the State of Nevada, a victim may report a sexual assault for up to 4 years after the event.

If You Want to Help Someone Who’s Been Assailed

- Listen to and believe them
- Don’t judge their actions or choices
- Remind them it is NOT their fault. The person who committed the crime is to blame
- Encourage them to report the crime to police, but respect their decision if they choose not to
- Encourage them to get medical care
- Encourage them to seek emotional support through counseling and other available resources
- Offer to go with them to the police department, hospital or counseling center

University students have access to the Counseling Center on campus at no additional cost. Counseling Services are included in your student fees.

Survivors may benefit from support groups that provide a safe environment to express feelings and concerns they may not want to share with family or friends.

Groups can assist in developing coping skills to regain a sense of control over their lives. The Counseling Center or Crisis Call Center can provide group referrals.

Sexual Assault is a crime. It's natural to want to clean up after being assaulted, but remember that important evidence remains on your body, clothing and items at the scene.
