OVERVIEW

The International Affairs Program is an interdisciplinary major for undergraduate students. The Program is intense, promotes a liberal arts perspective on undergraduate education, and prepares its graduates for advanced education and professional careers in an increasingly interdependent world.

Areas of study and the departments offering courses for International Affairs students include Economics, Geography, History, Political Science, Philosophy, foreign languages and cultures. Specialized options include:

- Asia
- Europe
- Latin America
- Africa
- Middle East
- Diplomacy, Law, and Organization
- International Environmental Studies
- International Political Economy

AN INTERDISCIPLINARY PROGRAM

While it is under the auspices of the Department of Political Science, the International Affairs Program is interdisciplinary: courses are drawn from a variety of academic disciplines to provide students many perspectives on their area of study. This gives students flexibility in planning a curriculum that is suited to their particular interests and career goals. Students choose approved courses from a variety of departments and are encouraged to take advantage of internship and study abroad opportunities.

CAREERS

Graduates of the International Affairs Program may seek careers in international organizations, the travel and tourism industry, international marketing, teaching, translating, intelligence analysis, private or public international law, diplomacy, and other professions that utilize special international knowledge. For such careers, mastery of at least one language is essential.
INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS MAJOR

The major in International Affairs requires students to complete 33 credits. Students may use up to nine credits from this major to simultaneously fulfill minor or second major requirements. Both capstone courses may be counted towards requirements for the major.

Entering students should plan to take Economics 102, Political Science 211 or 231, and foreign language courses during their first year. In some cases, introductory courses at the 200-level may be recommended in the second semester. International students should consider the 100-level survey courses in European and U.S. history or politics as ways of improving their performance in the Core Humanities sequence and in other courses in the major that presume some familiarity with history, society, and government in Europe and North America.

Students may opt to write a senior thesis and/or sign up for an internship at a relevant organization to satisfy from three to six credits in the program’s Specialized Component (Group 6). The thesis must be supervised by an appropriate faculty member in any of the areas of study and the departments offering courses for IA students. Students wanting to write a thesis should contact the International Affairs advisor.

Internships also need approval by the Political Science Department chair. Additionally, at the beginning of the semester students should contact the instructor of record for the internship course (IAFF 350) to obtain course requirement guidelines.

*Spanish majors or minors may substitute additional Advanced Area Studies Options for language credits.
ACADEMIC ADVISING

Because of the diversity of options within the major, students should seek academic advising prior to enrollment each semester. Consult the department’s website (https://www.unr.edu/political-science/advising) for the email address of the International Affairs Undergraduate Adviser, as well as other advising options. Students should bring a recent copy of their AR report (available in MyNevada) with them to each appointment.

SCHOLARSHIPS AND INTERNSHIPS

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS PROGRAM INTERNSHIPS

The International Affairs Program accepts applications from students who wish to gain experience while earning course credit. Interns are involved in coordinating events, communicating with international organizations, carrying out administrative duties for the International Affairs Program, assisting the International Relations faculty with research, and other projects as they arise.

GET INVOLVED!

There are several ways for students to get involved in the study of international affairs inside and outside the classroom.

MODEL UNITED NATIONS (IAFF 300)

The Model United Nations is a simulation of the United Nations system. Each Spring semester, students assume the roles of ambassadors to the United Nations and debate current global issues. Participants seek ways, through diplomacy and negotiation, in which the world community can deal with complex global concerns such as the environment, economic development, refugees, AIDS, conflict resolution, disarmament and human rights. Students from diverse backgrounds travel out of state to participate in these educational exercises to experience first-hand decision-making processes and diplomatic work at the United Nations. There is an extra fee associated with this program.

STUDY ABROAD

The University Studies Abroad Consortium (USAC) is an international program with an office at UNR. The consortium offers programs in sixteen countries. It also offers language programs in Chile, China, Costa Rica, France, Germany, Italy, and Spain. Students may enroll in these programs as early as the summer following high school graduation. Scholarships and financial aid can be used for all USAC programs and for other options approved in advance. USAC also has affiliations with universities that allow students to study in Australia, Denmark, Israel, Malta, New Zealand, Scotland, England, Ireland, and Thailand.

We strongly encourage students to plan to study abroad as an integral part of their training. For additional information visit the USAC website at www.usac.unr.edu or telephone 775-784-6569 or 866-404-8722.

MAP YOUR STUDIES

Plan ahead. Read carefully through the course catalogue and find the classes that match your area of interest. By mapping out classes you plan to take ahead of time you can make sure to fulfill any required pre-requisites and you can keep your semesters balanced. This will help you move through the program smoothly and graduate on time!

Not all courses are offered every semester. Sometimes classes are added, discontinued, or offered in different semesters. The following courses listed should be verified by the department offering the class.

ANTH 201—Peoples and Cultures of the World
