RESEARCH AND TEACHING INTERESTS

Research in the fields of social psychology, law, and social justice—specifically in the areas of legal decision-making, biases (e.g., religious or gender-based prejudice) and diversity in the legal system, family law, and well-being in the legal system. Teaching in the areas of psychology, social justice, and legal psychology. In both teaching and research, my focus is on developing supportive mentoring relationships with graduate and undergraduate students. The goal of my research lab group is to educate and mentor students in a collaborative, interdisciplinary, and inclusive learning environment.
