_____

Please give a general indication of your physical conditioning level and estimates of physical limits — be realistic! Recall that the field work will be done between sea level and 10,000-feet elevation typically in a high desert environment, in some cases with minimal shade and hiking all day. If you think you may have any physical problems doing field work (for example, fear of heights), please contact the camp director to discuss your situation. It is much better for us to know ahead of time so we can plan appropriately.

Grades and transcripts:

It is each student's responsibility to review final grades for accuracy and report any discrepancies. Grades are NOT automatically mailed to students. Students may access their final grades by using MyNEVADA at https://my.nevada.unr.edu.

To obtain a transcript, visit http://www.unr.edu/academic-central/forms-and-policies/forms/ transcripts, or call (775) 784-4700.

If you are a non-University student, you should check the transfer grade policy at your school to ascertain if a letter grade for field camp will transfer as a letter grade to your record (if you need a letter grade).

The University of Nevada, Reno maintains worker's compensation insurance for employees, but provides no insurance coverage for students. Each student should consider what insurance coverage he or she may require, and make arrangements for that coverage before coming to field camp.

This field course is designed for geology majors who have completed their junior year. Prerequisites include courses in mineralogy/petrology; stratigraphy/sedimentology; structural geology/tectonics and field methods. Please include an unofficial transcript with your application to allow assessment of your suitability for this course. List below any additional courses (not shown on your transcript) that you will have completed before coming to camp. If you have any questions regarding these prerequisites, contact the camp director to discuss your situation.
